PROGRAM

The major in Celtic Studies is designed to give students both a broad understanding of the place of Celtic languages and cultures in the world and a firm grounding in one or more of the Celtic languages with an innovative linkage of language and literature-in-translation courses intended to allow students maximum flexibility in pursuing their programs in addition to cultural studies courses in mythology, folklore, historical studies, and Medieval studies.

In addition to three semesters of language study, students will be required to organize their major coursework with reference to one other methodological or disciplinary area chosen from Anthropology, History, Comparative Literature, Linguistics, Medieval Studies, History, Scandinavian, or another related language, literature, or cultural studies course.

REQUIREMENTS

PREPARATION FOR TRANSFER AT THE JUNIOR LEVEL

The lower-division prerequisites for the Celtic Studies major are usually taken at UC Berkeley upon transfer. These include two semesters of lower-division language and Celtic Studies 70 "The World of the Celts."

The elementary and intermediate first-year language sequences are started during the student's first Fall semester at Berkeley. The required 3-semester language sequence can be completed in the two years following admission. Celtic Studies 70 is also taken the first Fall semester.

Once admitted, students who have a prior background in their proposed target language (modern Irish or Welsh) may be required to take a language proficiency test or to consult with the department language program coordinator for placement in the correct language course level.

Prerequisites for this major are not offered at California community colleges; however, students may be admitted to the Celtic Studies major without the 3 prerequisites as it is possible to complete all requirements for this major upon admission to UC Berkeley.

Prerequisites include:

Two first-year language courses in either modern Irish (Celtic Studies 15 and 85) or modern Welsh (Celtic Studies 16 and 86) to be started during the student’s first Fall semester at Berkeley. The required 3-semester language sequence can be completed in the two years following admission.

Celtic Studies 70 (The World of the Celts) to be taken the first Fall semester at Berkeley.

Once admitted, students who have a prior knowledge of a Celtic language may be required to take a language proficiency test or consult with the department language program coordinator for placement in the correct language course level. Students with prior knowledge of a Celtic language may apply for credit by examination.
