GENERAL INFORMATION

DATED MATERIAL, SUBJECT TO CHANGE. PLEASE CONSULT CURRENT UCSD GENERAL CATALOG FOR ANY ADDITIONAL INFORMATION.

Special Advising Note:

Chinese Studies is an interdisciplinary program that allows the student interested in China to utilize the university's offerings in various departments to build a major leading to a B.A. degree. Many of the participating faculty in the program have a converging interest in contemporary China. For this reason, this is one of the strongest programs on modern Chinese society now available. The student choosing a major in Chinese Studies must meet the following requirements.

1. Two years of Mandarin Chinese (CHIN 10 A-B-C and CHIN 20 A-B-C ) or equivalent Chinese knowledge.
2. Twelve upper-division four-unit courses in Chinese studies topics.
  - a. Courses must be taken from at least three departments or programs.
  - b. Three of the twelve courses must be upper-division Chinese history.
  - c. One of those courses should be a four-unit seminar or colloquia in which students are expected to write a substantial term paper. Typically the Department of History offers at least one colloquium per academic year, which is usually numbered HIEA 161 to 171. The student will need to request and receive permission from the professor and the Department of History before enrolling in such a course. The colloquium must be taken at UCSD.
  - d. No more than six of the upper-division courses may be language acquisition courses.
  - e. A minimum of six upper-division courses must be taken at UCSD.
3. As a rule, all courses must be taken and completed for a letter grade for both the major and minor. Exceptions are granted for CHIN 198 and CHIN 199.

All students must do a placement interview before enrolling in their first Mandarin Chinese course at UCSD. Instructions for the interview can be located at the Chinese Studies Program website: <http://chinesestudies.ucsd.edu/language/placement-info.html>

NOTE: One year of Community College course work equals three quarters of UCSD course work.
