PROGRAM

The Asian American and Asian Diaspora Studies Program offers a unified and comprehensive undergraduate curriculum that seeks to make at least three major contributions.

First, it prepares students for positions of service and leadership in Asian American communities. To do this, the program draws heavily on the curricula of such schools and departments as Education, Public Health, Law, and Sociology. The program itself offers instruction in those areas relating to the special needs of Asian American communities.

Second, the program explores the hitherto neglected aspects of the cultural, political, and historical experience of Asians in the United States, and prepares students for graduate work in their own and allied fields.

Third, the program broadens the curriculum at Berkeley to include instruction that reflects the conditions of Asians and other Third World people living in America.
